Docket of the four of hypeuls - June Terms

G. P. DONRE, May TUESDAY, JUNE 26, 1966.

The Proposed Constitutional Amendment.

Concerning the new amendment to the Constitution proposed by Congress to the States we have two remarks to make. The first is that it cannot receive the canction of three fourths of the States; and, secondly, if it could, there is nothing which appears upon the face of it to show that its ratification would complete the work of restoration already begun.

In reference to the first of these propo sitions, the facts are notorious, and patent to every intelligent citizen of the country. The whole number of States in the Union being thirty-six, it takes twenty-seven of them to amend the organic law. There are now eleven States not represented. If every one of the twenty-five States represented in Congress should ratify the amendment, there would still be lacking two States to make it valid. So far as the practical question is concerned the lackng of two States is as good or as bad as a dozen. The amendment must be ratified by twenty-seven States. The ratification by twenty-six only is of no more value

But there are two more States that will not touch this proposed amendment-Kentucky and Deleware. These reduce the number that may ratify it to twentythree-four less than the required number. Of what use will the adoption of this proposed amendment be by twentythree States? Furthermore, if there is a fair expression of public opinion, we be-lieve it will be rejected by both Maryland and Missouri. This completes the list of the States that were lately slaveholding. Of the other States, there is a strong probability that it will be rejected-prowided it be not rushed through with indecent haste by the members of Legislatures | have been inflicted upon members of Conalready elected-by Indiana, California, gress, for insults given in debate, and no and Oregon, and perhaps by other States. There are large numbers of Chinese in California, and their presence will have an important bearing, we think, upon the action of her citizens in repect to this question. The States referred to subtractd from the whole number in the Union will leave just eighteen, or one half. But, them, but it may him admitting that all these doubtful States go for the amendment, there still remain at twenty-three in favor of it-which makes its final adoption impossible.

We shall be told, doubtless, that one of ne eleven States-Tennessee-will ratify which will make the number, including all the doubtful States, favoring it twentyfour, or three less than the requisite nun er, twenty-seven. Admitting this for the ake of argument, still cui bono? To what purpose the adoption of any amendment to the Constitution by twenty-four tates? we again ask. Suppose all the doubtful States should ratify it, and Tennessee and Arkansas, there are still lack ing two States to make it binding; and ere is no power upon earth that we know anything of that can secure the two more States to it.

In this glance at the facts we have not noticed the merits of the amendment at all. What is the use of discussing an impossibility? That may do for alchemist nation of a lunatic asylum, and fancy cians, but it hardly becomes a sensible tor, or even a member of Congress. To alk about questions wholly impracticable n connection with government-excent to show their absurdities—is nuworthy the name of statesmarship and discreditable to political economists or sound thinkers. If, however, the amendment under co sideration could be ratified by thre fourths of the States-and we have show that it cannot be-there is nothing upo the face of it to prove that it could would do anything to complete the pract cal work of reconciliation, which has already made such progress.

There is nothing said in it about re toration or the admission of loyal representatives from any States who are now arbitrarily excluded. Congress might or might not then admit such loyal represen atives to their seats. That body can do this now as well as after such ratification We suppose that the framers of the amendment mean to have it understo that, if twenty-seven States will adopt it they will then favor the admission of mem bers elect to Congress who are properly qualified to their places from States tha are now excluded. But there is nothing in the amendment, we repeat, to indicate this or anything clse looking to permanent Larmony.

It is long, and embraces a great variety of things-some good, some bad, and some ind fferent.

The authors of this proposition to the States knew very well before they made it that it could not be ratified. They knew and they know well enough that it will only prolong the period of strife, and put far off that which shall end the everiest ing wrangle We regard it as a purely partisanship and not of statesmanship; a trick, a deception, a frand upon popular intelligence: as having no healing in it for our national disorders, but as an irri tant, a blister. a poison; as something to pander to popular prejudice, and to exas perate rather than to soothe. It is designed to throw the responsibili ty of stopping the process of restoration upon the eleven States not now represent ed in Congress by attempting to force upon them propositions which it is morally impossible for them to accept. It is an effort to force negro suffrage upon them and in fact to establish perfect equality i all things between the blacks and white of the country, for the amendment is so vaguely worded in some parts of it as t mean almost anything and everything that any person may choose to have

We have already said that it is useless t discuss an impossibility, and we shall not

Eis of this amendment. we are done. We trust that for decency's we are done. We trust that for decency's sake no attempts will be made to rush so Hydraulic Cement. important a measure as this through Legislatures not elected in reference to the question. Let it take its regular Legislatures not elected in reference to the question. Let it take its regular course. Let it be ratified or rejected decently and in order. It is a time of peace, and there is no reason or shadow of one for hurrying such a question as this through the Legislatures of the States pell mell, without giving the people time pell mell, without giving the people time to reflect upon it and making their will CHAMPION CLOTHES WRING-known through the ballot-box.

We have already printed the amend nent, but, as some of our readers may have overlooked it, we give it again, a

The Queen's Own eventually left for the front in Pullman's newest style of sleeping cars, and reached Ridgeway. Here the Queen's Own unpacked their hampers and breakfasted upon cold beef, tea, he rolls, butter, and a liberal supply of alf-and-alf. They annihilated the "blarsted Right" most margificently, and nut them. 'aff-and-aff. They annihilated the "blarsted Hirish" most magnificently, and put themselves in marching order. They advanced singing, as became men who were the Queen's Own, that noble authem, "God Save the Queen." They came in sight of some low bushes, and a minie ball pierced the big drum. Another bullet from the same bushes demoralized the trombons; whereupon the band was ordered to the roar and the Queen's Own, they are into pefore they saw a number of blockenians, in green shirts and pantalo them. The Colonel of the Queen's Own called out to this ill-mannered, motley crowd to halt and let the Queen's Own charge them: but the kernes, not under structure the English language as spoken in Canada by the Queen's Own people, did not halt, but fired a volley, whereupon the Colonel (who, though is name was Hocker, was not of the fighting family), thought come arrangement and did the control of the fighting family). went back there for that purpose. The Queen's Own were thus brought face face with a gang of the "Hirish," where upon the Queen's Own, by way of showin bow destructive they could have been if so of isposed, fired their rides over the heads of the Fenians, and then retreated. The Fenians fellowed The red-coats did their beet in making speed, but were not all equal to the lean and hungry Fenians. Colonel Hooker led the retreat and the Queen's Own, having their dead and wound's commades on the field, fied from a comparative hundful of Fenians, and did not step until they had put full fifteen miles between them and the field of autle. One hundred of the Queen's Own were overtaken and captured. There are those who think the Queen's Own orght to have shool their ground and fought the Fenians, but this is unjust. It is true they numbered three to one of the enemy, but the special duty of the Queen's Own was to hold Canada, and how could they hold Canada if they stood there and git chot? How could they expect to be knighted if they permitted transcribes to be killed by the benighted Fenians.

The Mormon Outrage.

Much interest naturally attaches to every fact relating to that strange and incongruous system of religion called Mormonism. A bock has lately been published at the Riverside Press, in Cambridge, which professes to be an anther tie account of the life led by the dupes of the Mormon prophet. In a chapt ren' Brigham as the Lord of the Harem, the tener life of this man is no utely des rile. The largest building is that con-taining the "tithing store" and office, and the Descret printing office. Close by there is a long row of buildings for the various mechanical purposes, and a number of small tenements are scattered over the premises for the use of some of the em-ployes. The next large building, east of the Descret store and printing office, is the "Lion Honse," where the prophet's family lives.

The daily life of Brigham Young is after The daily life of Brigham Young is after the following manner:
"He rises early, calls the whole family together: they sing a hym; he prays fortently, and they separate for the duties of the day. In past times he ate at the Harcm. His fare is very simple, usually consisting of a bowl of milk, covered with cream, and dry toast or bread.
"His next duty used to be, to 'see the women folks,' to whom he was friendly and kind, but no more. He is not Brigham the husband, but Brigham the Prophet and Seer. The women fear and reverence him as their God, watch his countenance as he gives them counsel, and look upon

We know of a well-authenticated an nrious case of somnambulism which hap ened in a town not far from New York last week. A young lady came over the city, Thursday, and went with her cle and aunt to spend the day in Cor Park. On the way they had a talk the conductor of young the Astor House as to which route they should take to the Park. The discussion seems to have impressed itself on the young ludy's mind, for the following morning she rose, dressed herself, put money in her purse, went to the station, bought a ticket and a return ticket for this city, twelve miles distant, came into Hoboken on the niles distant, came into Hoboken on th cars, crossed the ferry, and was talking to a conductor near the Astor House, when— she awoke! She inmediately took a re-turn train for home, and her arrival, an hour after, much relieved her friends, who were searching for her in the town. Somnami uliam seems to be

The Italian Army - The War Feeling. Impending War.

The correspondents in Italy make par-ticular note of the great number of minors and apprentices that are cullisting. The correspondent of the Daily News menions the presence of colored soldiers dur the departure of a troop: As the moment of departure approach-a Nubian, elegantly dressed in a suit braided black cloth, and wearing knickcerbockers, drew general attention to him-aclf by stepping forth from the crowd of spectators, mounting one of the carriages, and taking an affectionate farewell of ser-eral volunteers, whom he recognized as if acquaintances. As every flock has its own black sheep, no detachment of Gari-aldini seems to be complete without its attendant negro.

The city of Bologna, which is still the headquarters of Gen. Cialdini, who has just returned here from a visit of inspection to Ferrara, is swarming with soldiery inside and out, and not a few of its areades, once the haunt of lazy priests, are now converted into cavalry stables, a purpose converted into eavalry stables, a purpose for which they are most admirably adapted. The walls of the city have been freshly loop-holed, and the city is more like an intrenched camp than a haunt of citizens." Another correspondent writes:

"Tew of the volunteers were red caps or shirts, although of these there was a sprinkling, which showed conspicuously against the brown, black, and grey of the rest—like the men who hunt in pink in those parts of England where the field is chiefly made up of parsons and farmers

Effect of Sunlight on Window

Glass.
It is a familiar observation that window glass shows a tinge of color—purple, blue, green, or yellow—when looked at from outside against a white shade or shutter within. The very best qualities of glass even the best French plate, although white when placed in the windows, often become colored for expressions. when placed in the windows, often become colored after exposure to air and light for months or years. We find in a volume of the "Proceedings of the Boston Natural History Society," lately published, some observations by Mr Thomas Gatileld, which add something to our knowledge of this obscure subject. Mr. Gaffield exposited some thirty specimens of plate, crown, and sheet glass, coming from various factories in Eugland, France, Belgium, Germany, and the United States, to the full action of the sun during the month of July, in such a manner that the specimens were exposed to reflected light and heat as well as to that which fell directly upon them. The glass, which already had a decided green or blue tinge, though called columbes, was not affected; but all the white glass, and all the glass which was nearly white, whatever its precious hue, turned to a religious called columber.

cry light-colored glass was, in some iuices, perceptibly affected by even a ide day's exposure. Mr. Guffield exted ten pieces of French white plate is, one of which showed the original briess glass, while the others demonted the change of hue toward yellow, ir an exposure respectively of one, two,
four days; one, two, and three weeks;
two, and three months. The changes he first four days were slight; but the specimens were so yellow as to exa very marked contrast with the ori-glass. That the color permeates the of the glass, and is not confined to surface, or produced by reflection from, was proved by grinding off tone-sixteenth of an inch from both sees and the four edges of one of the timens, which, notwithstanding, after ohshing still exhibited the same yellow

It is to be noticed that in these experiments, only the light-colored glasses were perceptilly affected, but it is quite possible that a longer exposure, for years instead of months, would alter every color in some degree. Theories to account for these changes of color under the influence of the sun's rays, are not lacking, but a barge multiplication of experiments and a greater accumulation of similar facts are necessary before any satisfactory explanation of these curious phenomena can lanation of these curious phenomena caell be given.

SELAH. - The learned are divided i opinion as to the meaning of this word, which occurs so often in the Psalms. The Targums, and most of the Jewish commentators, give to the word the meaning of eternally, forever Rahhi Kimchi regards it as a sign to elevate the voice. The authors of the Septuagint translation appear to have regarded it as a musical or rythnical note. Herder regards it as industring a change of tone. With we are pear to have regarded it as a musical or rythmical note. Herder regards it as indicating a change of tone, Matheson as a musical note equivalent, perhaps, to the word repeat According to Luther and others it means silence. Gesenius explains it to mean, "Let the instruments play and the singers stop." Wocher regards it as equivalent to sureum enda—up my soul. Sommer, after examining all the seventy-four passages in which the word occurs, recognizes in every case "an actual appeal or summons to Jehovah. They are ealls for aid and prayers to be heard, expressed eith r with entire directness, or if not in the imperative, "Hear, Jehovah." or awake, Jehovah, and the like still carnest addresses to God that he like, still carnest addresses to God tha would remember and hear, &c. The word itself he regards as indicating a blast of tumpets by the priests. Sclah, itself, he thinks an abridged expression used for Higgaion Sclah—Higgaion indicating the acount of the stringed instruments and

A Coevier School Master.—I remember when I was a bey there came a man to my native village in Louisiana. He was a fine looking fellow, shrewl, with excellent common sense. He used to panish the half of ins every lay to make our parents think he was a fine disciplinarian. And they used to judge a man by that. This man had eighty sebolars, and he undertook to teach them all. At night he wrote up the books for one of the largest mercantile houses in the town. One night he eloped with all the funds of that establishment. And the next week came a big writ of some kind from the Governor of Vermont for him, saying he was an escaped convict. Now it is to just such characters that the morals and the training of our youth are entrusted—"Old Man," in Mississippi Clarion.

Once united, you will march on, through the propagation of truth by your apostleship to conquer our ideal. But do not turn this ideal into a condition of that help which a sacred duty hids you to give. Would you have warned Joau of Are not to drive the English out of France? Would you have told the Spaniards of 1808 not to repel the French invasion, since France was a monarchy corrupt and inept, and because the majority of the Spaniards were not ripe for republican institutions? The national question is sinued against by whosever neglects to resolve it. The question of internal politics can be but as uestion of internal politics can be h error and nothing mere.
